Chairman's statement

Digital UK's increasingly important role is not only managing day-to-day operations for UK terrestrial television but also leading on the development of a long-term strategy for the platform as it adapts to shifts in technology and viewer behaviour.

This crucial area of work is already bearing fruit in the form of Freeview Play. I'm delighted that a year after announcing our intention to develop a Freeview-branded connected TV service, the first TVs and set-top boxes are now rolling off production lines, signalling the dawn of an exciting new era for free to view television in the UK. I would like to congratulate everyone involved in overcoming the many challenges in bringing this exciting project to fruition.

The development of Freeview Play is a great example of the importance of the close working relationship between Digital UK, Freeview, our respective member organisations and a host of industry partners. Cross-industry collaboration is also vital to the effective management of the DTT platform. This was particularly true of the successful move in September 2014 of all Children's and News services to new channel numbers, freeing up more room for the steady stream of channels applying to join the Freeview line-up. I am pleased to note that this not only went well from a technical standpoint but also that the information and support in place for viewers kept disruption to a minimum. While seemingly simple, in truth such events require a great deal of planning, coordination and communication across broadcasters and industry to ensure everything goes as smoothly as possible.

Looking ahead, we will continue to increase our focus on supporting viewers, whether it be answering questions about new services such as Freeview Play or managing technical changes on the platform. This area of activity will be important as airwaves become more crowded and we begin to prepare for another spectrum shake-up to boost capacity for more mobile broadband services in the years ahead. In this context we look forward to the World Radiocommunications Conference later this year and will continue to press for positive support by European institutions for the role of DTT.

Amid all this change, Digital UK and its members – the BBC, ITV, Channel 4 and Arqiva - will continue working constructively with Government, Ofcom and our industry partners to ensure that viewers come first and Freeview remains central to TV in the UK. We are rightly proud that Freeview is the country's most popular TV service and I would like to thank Jonathan Thompson and the Digital UK team for their hard work and commitment which has helped this happen.

Strategic report

Review of the business

We have a fantastic television sector in this country and we should all be proud of the significant cultural and economic role it plays. As a nation we are both great producers and consumers of brilliantly creative content. UK television punches way above its weight on the world's television screens.

In an era of huge technological change, live broadcast television remains remarkably resilient and still contributes the vast majority of people's TV consumption here in the UK. I don't see this changing any time soon. But the arrival of bigger, better, connected televisions, the growing use of tablets and smartphones to consume TV content and the emergence of over-the-top content providers like Netflix and Now TV are transforming how we discover and consume video content. While there's no sign we are falling out of love with television as a nation, audiences rightly expect greater choice and flexibility in how, where and when they watch the programmes they love.

I firmly believe that digital terrestrial television must and will evolve to embrace the change and opportunities that new technology and internet connectivity are bringing. Only services that adapt will continue to be successful. This will be our priority focus at Digital UK over the months and years ahead.

Our mission is to ensure that there continues to be a strong, evolving and attractive free-to-air television choice for viewers in the UK. A platform that retains the principles that underpin its historic strength but evolves to embrace how consumer are watching TV.

Freeview's strength is rooted in some simple characteristics: its availability to virtually every home in the UK, that it provides a reliable and easy-to-use service at no cost to the viewer beyond a one-off purchase of reception equipment, and that it offers a growing choice of programming and functionality from high definition channels to PVR recording. And, of course, one of Freeview's greatest strengths is that it is free of control by any one single player in the market – open to anyone – promoting choice, competition and innovation.

In our report last year, I highlighted the enduring appeal and strength of terrestrial TV in the UK and the critical decisions facing policy makers with regard to the airwaves used by the platform. The last 12 months have seen a number of positive developments that help to ensure the ongoing success of Freeview. In particular, I welcome the support from both Ofcom and Government for the vital role that the platform plays for viewers and the importance of its ongoing access to the airwaves over which our services are broadcast.

We will continue to work on securing a positive outcome from the World Radio Conference later this year to secure the long-term future of the platform, while also working with Government and Ofcom on the successful clearance of the 700MHz band currently used by DTT, ensuring viewers suffer minimal disruption through this transition.

We are also embracing the growing role of IP distribution with the launch of our new connected television service – Freeview Play – in partnership with the Freeview team. This will take the best of what people already love about Freeview and the potential of internet connectivity to enhance the service while retaining the principles of simplicity, choice and being subscription-free. The team at Digital UK deserve enormous credit for delivering this project, as do the many partners we have worked with as we prepare for launch.

We are committed to continuing to ensure that digital terrestrial television evolves and adapts in this country, providing the choice, freedom and flexibility that viewers expect. Our focus is on how best to enhance and improve the service, working in close collaboration with all the other stakeholders who play a critical part in how the platform operates – from the breadth of channels providers through to all our partners in the consumer electronics sector. It is Digital UK's role to lead the co-ordination and engagement of all those who have a stake in the future of free-to-air television.

My thanks in particular to Caroline and the rest of the Digital UK Board for their ongoing support and engagement. I look forward to an exciting and important year ahead for the platform.

Accounting policies

Basis of accounting

The financial statements have been prepared under the historical cost convention and in accordance with applicable accounting standards.

As detailed in the Director's report, the accounts have been prepared on a going concern basis.

Turnover

Revenue is recognised when services are performed or when fixed expenditure is incurred.

The Five main categories of income are:

Platform Management - Operations Income: contributions from the members in equal proportions

Platform Management – Multiplex Specific income: Contributions from the members proportionate to the number of multiplexes operated by each member.

Freeview Play development and project management: contributions from the members in equal proportions

700MHz preparation for spectrum clearance project: contributions from Arqiva as part of a contract with Ofcom.

Non-member funding: Digital UK charges non-member multiplexes on the platform a multiplex services charge to cover the incremental cost of their integration into the central service information system, and an annual contribution towards the costs of operating the central service information system. This charge is banded according to the UK coverage of the multiplex.

Digital UK also recovers incremental costs which include costs of the Contact Centre supporting new channels launching and costs of 3rd parties using the Post Code Database.

In 2014 non-Member funding was £207,000 (2013: £141,000)

Depreciation

Depreciation is calculated so as to write off the cost of an asset, less its estimated residual value, over the useful economic life of that asset as follows:

Leasehold improvements	-	25%
Plant & machinery	-	25%
Fixtures, fittings and equipment	-	25%

Operating lease agreements

Rentals applicable to operating leases where substantially all of the benefits and risks of ownership remain with the lessor are charged against income on a straight line basis over the period of the lease.

Pension costs

The Company operates a defined contribution pension scheme. The assets of the scheme are held separately from those of the Company in an independently administered fund. The amount charged to the profit and loss account represents the contributions payable to the scheme in respect of the accounting period.
